NEW INFUSION CENTER: CANCER CARE REIMAGINED

In honor of Karen H. Hanson
Given by the Hampshire Foundation and the
extended Hanson Family

Donated by Dr. Maithili Rao
and Kishore Ballal

Arriving for his appointment at the new Infusion Center at Carol G. Simon Cancer Center in March, donor, patient and former Atlantic Health System Trustee Bob Mulcahy couldn't believe his eyes. A spacious room, full of natural light immediately put Mulcahy, a member of Carol G. Simon Cancer Center's Philanthropy Council at ease, and to his delight he was led to a private space to sit during infusions while still being able to see his care team.

"There was an air of calmness about the whole experience," Mulcahy said. A year ago, when he began receiving treatment, the Infusion Center was often more crowded and wait times for appointments were sometimes longer. The renovation and expansion changed all that.

Since its opening in January, the center has had more than 4,500 patient visits through March, up 15 percent from 2019. Twelve new infusion chairs are available for a total of 36, with both open and private set-ups, as some patients enjoy interaction while others prefer privacy.

medical care.

Lydia Nadeau, RN, MBA, executive director, and Eric Whitman, MD, medical director of Atlantic Health System Cancer Care met with healthcare staff and patient advisory groups for advice in the design process. Recliners for patients, a comfortable chair for family members, iPads, blanket warmers and music, pet and art therapy were all non-negotiables and are reflected in the new design, promoting a healing experience and patient-centric care.
